

Training Young Brains to Behave

Benedict Carey

New York Times, 9/19/2008

A small group of educational and cognitive scientists now say that mental exercises of a certain kind can teach children to become more self-possessed at earlier ages, reducing stress levels at home and improving their experience in school.

View Article on the New York Times